

NEW ROSTRUM IN CEMETERY FOR PRESIDENT

Arrangements Nearing Completion for Memorial Day Observance.

ADDRESS WILL BE BROADCAST

The National broadcasting company will broadcast President Franklin D. Roosevelt's address from the Gettysburg national cemetry rostrum, Memorial day.

The local committee on arrangements received word to this effect from the broadcasting company this morning.

Colonel Starling, chief of the White House secret service detail, will come to Gettysburg next week to work out final details preparatory to the president's arrival.

President Roosevelt will motor to Gettysburg and at the conclusion of the exercises in the cemetery his party will leave for New York where the chief executive will review the U. S. Fleet.

300 on Rostrum

A huge addition has been erected to the front of the permanent rostrum in the cemetery. The enlarged rostrum will seat approximately 300 people. It extends in front of the rostrum with a special speaker's stand on the front of the addition.

From the cemetery roadway, east of the rostrum, a special ramp has been constructed for the special use of Mr. Roosevelt.

The ramp is four feet wide and 12 feet long and extends from the edge of the roadway, a few inches below the level of an automobile running board, up to the level of the rostrum.

This is done because of the physical condition of the president who is handicapped in walking up a flight of stairs.

Mounted Troopers

One hundred mounted state troopers will patrol the cemetery from early morning until after the president leaves. In addition a detail of secret service agents will accompany the president.

An enlarged force of highway patrolmen will assist local officers in handling the traffic. Parking regulations will not affect local merchants who are open on Memorial day, the committee emphasizing the urgency of permitting visitors to motor into town and transact normal business if they desire.

A special platform will also be erected, away from the rostrum, for the talking picture cameraman and those photographers who take still pictures.

Reporters will work at a special press table erected in front of the rostrum.

Guides Approve Billboard Plan

Members of the Gettysburg Battlefield Guides' association, Friday evening, temporarily approved the proposal to erect four large billboards on the outskirts of town on our leading highways.

The guides who attended the meeting voted to solicit three dollars from each of the 88 members of the association as their portion of the expense incurred in erecting the signs.

A committee was appointed by the guides to confer with Chamber of Commerce officials relative to having their contribution to the billboards' expense apply on membership in the Chamber.

The proposal will be presented to the Chamber membership at a meeting Monday night.

tination or purpose. All were heavily armed.

Roy Morris, 35, who originally gave his name as George R.
Graham, and John R. Pattie, 48,

Seniors Score Hits in "It Pays to Advertise" Comedy Friday Evening

Youthful High Students Make Creditable Showing in Difficult Roles.

With a well-trained cast performing in a creditable manner, the three-act farce comedy, "It Pays to Advertise," was presented to a fair-sized, but unusually appreciative audience, by members of the senior class at the Gettysburg high school auditorium, Friday evening.

Veteran theatre-goers who witnessed the performance said the senior thespians deserved a packed house for the show, and the hope was expressed that the play might be repeated before commencement.

While the leading roles were capably handled by Keith Fischer, Robert Williams, John Brehm, Jr., Miss Charlotte Waltemyer and Miss Mary Jane Appier, the minor parts were skillfully presented by the others in the cast, and left little to be desired.

Comedian's Role

Signal histrionic honors went to Keith Fischer, who portrayed the role of "Ambrose Peale," the live-wire advertising and publicity man, who, being "sold" himself on advertising, proceeds to sell those services to others with whom he comes in contact. It was also Fischer's part to inject the laughs into the play, and he handled that difficult assignment in an easy and natural manner, which made the humor ring true.

The love interest in the play was supplied by Robert Williams and Miss Waltemyer, who quickly won the audience by the manner in

WHITE COLLAR CWA JOBS OUT

Lack of Funds Causes Abandonment of Two Projects in Adams County.

Immediate discontinuance of all so-called "white collar" projects in Gettysburg and Adams county was the substance of a telegram received today by Maurice W. Bushman, acting emergency relief administrator in Adams county, from Eric H. Biddle, executive director of the state emergency relief board.

Lack of appropriations from Washington has forced the discontinuance, Mr. Biddle said. In explaining that lack of funds was responsible for stopping all "white collar" projects, Mr. Biddle said, "It is to be hoped that congress will make necessary appropriations speedily in order to carry out what are the very least moral obligations of the federal government."

Only two "white collar" projects are in progress in Gettysburg and Adams county at present. One is the state social survey, headquarters of which were maintained on the third floor of the First National bank building, and the other was a real estate and social survey, managed by Fred Troxell, on the second floor of the First National bank building.

8 Work Projects
No reference was made to work projects of which there are eight now under way in Gettysburg and Adams county, in Mr. Biddle's telegram, although previous orders have been received to have all such work projects cease on or before May 31.

The payroll for the week ended Thursday was announced today by Mr. Bushman as follows:
Local work projects, 83 employees, $1,046.72; administrative projects, 3 workers, $80.78; state social survey project, 52 employees, $578.50; civil works administration, 4 employees, $61.96, and the state highway department projects, 94 employees, $738.50, a total of $2,506.46.

Howard Thomas, Negro, Gets 3-to-7 Years for Shooting State Police

Judge McPherson Declares "Drunkenness Is No Defense in a Crime of This Character;" George Cook, Negro, Draws One and One-Half to 3 Years for Stabbing.

THREE OTHER DEFENDANTS ARE GIVEN TERMS IN JAIL

After asserting that "drunkenness is no defense in a crime of this character," Judge Donald P. McPherson sentenced Howard Thomas, negro, of Gettysburg, to serve from three to seven years in the Eastern penitentiary, Philadelphia, in court this morning.

Thomas, who entered pleas of nolle contendere to two charges of assault with intent to kill, and pleas of guilty to charges of larceny of a revolver and the illegal possession of a firearm, told the court he was drunk and didn't remember what happened on Sunday morning, March 18, when he is alleged to have stolen a revolver from the home of C. B.
Hartman, West Middle street, and later shot and wounded Trooper G. V. Stedman, of the local sub-station of the state police, who sought to arrest him.

The negro said he and some companions drank a quart of liquor at the Thomas home earlier in the day, and that he remembers nothing until the next morning in jail.

Trooper Stedman appeared in court against Thomas, and showed Judge McPherson the helmet he wore when it was pierced by one of the bullets fired by Thomas. The officer also showed the court a pair of his trousers with a bullet hole in the leg. He also exhibited the bullet which struck him in the thigh and which was removed at the Warner hospital.

Judge McPherson addressed the spectators when he pointed out that drunkenness cannot be pleaded as an extenuating circumstance in cases of this nature, and inferred that the newspapers should inform the general public of the law in regard to the commission of crime while under the influence of liquor.

George Cook, colored, of Gettysburg, convicted of aggravated assault and battery in connection with the stabbing of John Hoffman, West Middle street, in court this week, was sentenced to serve from 1 1/2 to three years in the Eastern penitentiary. Cook was originally charged with assault with intent to kill, but the jury reduced the charge to aggravated assault and battery. Thomas also was ordered to pay a fine of $1 and the costs of prosecution.

Thomas Jones, another negro, who pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying a concealed deadly weapon, and who told the court that this was the fourth time he was in trouble here, drew a suspended sentence, with the provision that he make immediate arrangements to leave Adams county and never return. "If you come back," Judge McPherson said, "you will be arrested and sentenced on this charge you now face." Jones said his home is at Durham, North Carolina.

Three Go To Jail
Frank Harriel, colored, a member of one of the C. C. C. camps on the battlefield, was before the court on a statutory charge, but he was returned to jail until Monday.

Three defendants were sentenced to jail. Charles Kauffman, Hamilton township, convicted of wantonly pointing and discharging a firearm, was sentenced to serve from six months to one year, the sentence to begin from the date of his arrest, March 15. He also was ordered to pay a fine of $1 and the costs.

Joseph I. Small, Middleburg, and Melvin Kauffman, Hanover, who entered pleas of guilty to charges of operating cars while under the influence of liquor, were each sentenced to serve 60 days in jail and to pay fines of $200 and the costs.

John W. Fogle, 23, of Adams county, charged with two larceny counts, was returned to jail for a later disposition of his case.

Pay For Chickens
Ira Duncan, of Gettysburg, charged with stealing 12 chickens from the home of E. J. Pfeffer, Baltimore street, entered a plea of guilty, and was placed on probation for one year. He also was ordered to pay Mr. Pfeffer $12, the value of the chickens taken, within 60 days and to pay the costs within six months. He also was ordered to abstain from the use of liquor during his probation. Duncan had been in jail since February 6.

Jacob Enig, charged with assault and battery, was ordered to return to court on Monday.

KIDNAPPER, IN FOR LIFE, FLEES

Abductor of 77-Year-Old Banker, Escapes From Illinois Prison.

Chester, Ill., April 28 (AP).—Randol Norvell, supposed "brains" of the sensational kidnapping of August Luer, 77-year-old Alton banker, last July 10, crawled through a sewer at the southern Illinois prison at Menard, near here, shortly before sundown Friday and escaped.

Nearly 300 officers, armed with rifles and machine guns and aided by searchlights, formed a posse and beat the brush along the Mississippi river for the life term convict.

Several hours after the escape Warden J. E. Raegan said he had reports the fleeing fugitive had been seen on the Missouri side of the river. The report sent additional men into the search, augmenting the original 200 who went out from the prison when the first alarm was spread.

Uses Tunnel In Break

Norvell, described as a "model prisoner," was working in the prison machine shop with 150 other prisoners, the warden said. Removing bars from a tunnel used to house water and heat pipes, the abductor crawled through the narrow chamber to the prison yard.

There he removed the cover from a sewer and crawled about forty yards to the outlet in the Mississippi river. It is not known by officials if he was met there by accomplices, but the general opinion was he was unaided.

It was more than two hours before the escape became known in the vicinity. Scores of guards were hunting him in the vicinity of the prison before townspeople knew the kidnapper was free.

Inquiry Under Way

Warden Raegan said an investigation was underway to determine how the life term prisoner managed to cut through the bars at the tunnel entrance. He declined to say if the bars had been sawed.

Norvell had been on detail in the machine shop for several weeks, the warden said. It was necessary for him to crawl under several pieces of machinery to reach the tunnel but once there, the flight through the sewer could have been accomplished without difficulty, officers said.

Luer, wealthy banker and meat packer, was taken from his home last summer by a woman and two men. He was released later near Collinsville, Illinois.

TWO ESCAPED CONVICTS SHOT

Quick-Shooting Posse Ends Brief Dash for Liberty Of Badmen.

Victorville, Calif., April 28 (AP).—Sudden death at the hands of a quick shooting posse of desert folk ended the flight of two escaped San Quentin convicts, one of whom was characterized by authorities as second only to Dillinger as a desperado.

In a running exchange of gunfire three miles south of this little community, death came quickly to Wanda P. Stewart, 29, and Walter H. Weyph, 40. The two had slugged their way out of San Quentin prison Thursday.

The convicts were trapped by a hastily summoned band composed of a deputy sheriff and three deputized civilians, as they drove toward Victorville from San Bernardino where a short while before they had released two policemen, whom they kidnapped in San Rafael.

Informed of the release of the policemen, Deputy Sheriff R. Stanley Snelidger, with three civilians, drove south to meet the escaping convicts.

An automobile with a red light sped by. Snelidger ordered the car around and gave chase. As the deputy's car gained ground the fugitives opened fire which was returned.

After a chase of nearly half a mile the fugitives car crashed into an embankment. Both the occupants were dead.

Want Busses and Trucks To Travel 500-Feet Apart

Rigid enforcement of the state law requiring trucks, busses and other commercial vehicles to travel at least 500 feet apart was urged today by the Pennsylvania motor federation, AAA, as the result of complaints that numerous accidents have been caused by violation of this provision of the vehicle code.

The federation called on state and local authorities to act and at the same time urged the cooperation of commercial vehicle drivers. The law was quoted as follows:

The operator of a motor vehicle shall not follow another vehicle more closely than is reasonable and prudent, having due regard to the speed of such vehicle and the traffic upon and condition of the highway.

The operator of any motor bus, motor omnibus, commercial motor vehicle, truck tractor or tractor, when traveling upon a highway outside of a business or residence district, shall not follow another such vehicle within five hundred (500) feet, but this shall not be construed to prevent one such vehicle overtaking and passing another such vehicle.

The penalty is fixed at $10.00 fine and costs of prosecution, and five days imprisonment in default of payment.

S. Edward Gable, president of the federation, recalled that for a number of years the law fixed one hundred feet as the distance required between commercial vehicles, but that this was extended to five hundred feet by the 1931 legislature. "Trucks and other slow moving vehicles traveling close together constitute a dangerous condition the lawmakers sought to eliminate in adding four hundred feet to the distance they are required to remain apart," Mr. Gable said.

"Complaints coming in from various parts of the state indicate that many truck and bus drivers either do not know of the change in regulations or do not heed them, for numerous instances of flagrant violations of this section of the vehicle code have been reported to us recently."

"Many truck and bus drivers realize the dangers of following each other closely and take every possible precaution to comply with the law, but others seem not to take into consideration either the law or the safety of other users of the highways and, with their heavy, lumbering vehicles, virtually become a law unto themselves. It is this latter, minority class we are endeavoring to reach through stricter enforcement of the law and the cooperation of all users of the highways."

REPORT BADMAN WAS WOUNDED

Dillinger's Henchman, "Baby Face" Nelson, Is Believed to Have Been Shot.

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—The law's bullets are putting creases, one by one, in the John Dillinger gang, but the outlaws haven't lost enough blood to halt their gun-roaring terror over the central west.

George "Baby Face" Nelson, diminutive gunman in the latest reported casualty in the Dillinger ranch.

A $6,000 bank robbery in a Chicago suburb is the latest outrage charged to the gang.

Al Johnson, a special deputy, reported today at Superior, Wisconsin, he believes he had wounded Nelson in an exchange of shots near Solon Springs, Wisconsin, last night.

The deputy was wounded slightly. "I took a pop at him and I think I hit him," Johnson said of his brush with Nelson. "His car careened to the side of the road. He probably was hit in the arm or shoulder, as I did not aim high."

While five thousand or more heavily armed officers, augmented by hundreds of volunteers, searched from Louisville northward, without further definite trace of Dillinger or Nelson, another of the Dillinger men was identified as the leader of a quintet of robbers who raided a Villa Park bank Friday.

He was Homer Van Meter, the swash-buckling ally who recently helped his chief in a sensational raid on the Warsaw, Indiana, police station, where they replenished their stock of guns and ammunition.

Convicts Face Old Punishment

Eddyville, Ky. (AP).—He doesn't have to wear a dunce cap, but otherwise the recalcitrant prisoner-student in the Kentucky penitentiary is subjected to about the same punishment meted out in the little red schoolhouse of grandfathers day.

Failure to "get up" his lessons brings the penalty of standing before the class with his face to the wall.

There is nothing compulsory about attending the prison school, but once a convict enrolls, he must do his "home work" and come to class with lessons prepared just like any child in grammar school.

BISHOP, AIDE ARE ACQUITTED

Southern Methodist Churchman Found Not Guilty of Campaign Charges.

Washington, April 28 (AP).—A jury in District of Columbia supreme court Friday found Bishop Cannon, Jr., and Miss Ada L. Burroughs innocent of any attempt to conceal campaign contribution in 1928.

After three hours of deliberations, during which the jury took four ballots, it brought to the bishop, sitting tensely forward on the edge of his chair, and Miss Burroughs, standing stiffly grasping a table, an acquittal on both counts of the indictment against them.

Nine Vote For Acquittal

On the first ballot, the jury voted nine innocent, one guilty of wilfully violating the corrupt practices act and two unwillingly but unlawfully violating. The second ballot found ten voting to acquit and two that the funds were unwillingly not reported. The third ballot was eleven to one for acquittal.

The charges involved money given Bishop Cannon by Edwin C. Jameson, a New York insurance executive, for use in the campaign in Virginia and other southern states against Alfred E. Smith.

Promises Statement

As his friends and newspaper men crowded about his chair in the courtroom, the bishop waved aside immediate comment. He said that later "after I take a nap" he would have a statement.

Miss Burroughs, too, preferred to remain silent, but she smiled when women pushed through the crowd to shake her hand or touch her arm and congratulate her.

There was little demonstration at the verdict. A few handclaps rippled through the hum of voices, but sharp shouts of "quiet" from marshals halted this.

To Start for Conference

Bishop Cannon said he would leave Friday night for a conference of Methodist Episcopal bishops at Jackson, Mississippi.

"I'll be leaving if the train leaves," he said.

A woman spectator, Miss Ada Picery, formerly of Parkersburg, West Virginia, now of Washington, fought her way through the crowd surrounding the bishop to exclaim:

"Bishop, I said I'd hug you if you were acquitted!"

"Hug Away," Says Bishop

"Hug away," the bishop said, smiling.

She did.

Report Roosevelt Favoring Money Base of 30Pc. Silver

Washington, April 28 (AP).—Congressional leaders said Friday they had been informed by President Roosevelt that he was willing to have thirty per cent of the nation's money backed by silver, but he wanted no mandatory legislation of that kind before the next session of congress.

At present, they said he told them, about twelve per cent of the money has silver reserves behind it, and about eighty-eight per cent gold. They quoted him as saying further that when McKinley was president the silver money percentage was twenty-two, and Mr. Roosevelt had no objection to seeing it go as high as thirty per cent.

Wants Delay of Nine Months

They said he added, however, that conditions demanded there be no compulsion on the government to buy additional silver like the requirement in the Dies bill now before the senate or in the Goldsbrough monetary authority bill.

He was described as feeling that monetary conditions remain unsettled, but that within nine months they should be clarified and that a decision upon a permanent monetary policy should be delayed until then so the country could take advantage of its experiences.

Some of those who talked with the president said they understood it was Mr. Roosevelt's plan to continue increasing the use of silver until it reached approximately the thirty per cent level, but that he intended to do that gradually and carefully so as to avoid any drastic inflation.

Steagall Heads Delegation

Conferring with the president was Chairman Steagall (Dem., Ala.), of the house banking committee, and Representatives Goldsbrough, (Md.), Hancock (N. C.), Busby (Miss.), Cross (Texas) and Scrugham (Nev.), all democrats.

They went to see the president to learn his attitude toward the Goldsbrough bill, which would establish a federal authority with full control over all currency and prescribe the purchase of silver at the rate of 50,000,000 ounces a month.

The only comfort his visitors got was an indorsement of the aims set forth in the bill. That would declare it the policy of the United States to restore and maintain the "normal purchasing power of the dollar," figuring that normal as the 1926 level.

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE

by Walter C. Brown

SYNOPSIS: Pierre Dufresne, contractor and political boss, has been receiving threatening letters. He is ambushed on a lonely road in the absence of his bodyguard. Director of Police Dufresne, when the ambush is reported, throws a cordon of police around Dufresne, and assigns Detective Sergeant Harper to the case.

Chapter Four
DINNER FOR TWO
"Andrews, we'll have the coffee and brandy in the living-room." Pierre Dufresne turned to his guest, who had caught that faint pucker of disapproval on the butler's mask-like face. "If you are ready, Harper—"

Detective-Sergeant Stephen Harper rose, following his host's example. The gray-haired servant was speaking. "Mr. Harris brought those papers from the office, sir, but the police made him wait outside."

"Your men take their orders very literally, sergeant," said Dufresne, smiling. Then, to the waiting Andrews, "Bring me the papers."

The dinner itself had been excellent, each succeeding course testifying anew to the soundness of the host's choice. All during the meal Dufresne had deftly ignored the object of Harper's visit. Time and again the detective had brought up the question of the attempted shooting that afternoon and the matter of the anonymous letters Dufresne had received, only to have the talk adroitly steered into other channels.

Harper chose a comfortable chair near the fireplace and Dufresne seated himself opposite. In a few moments Andrews appeared with the coffee and brandy. He served them silently, his footsteps inaudible on the deep rug. When everything was arranged, he produced a bulky envelope and handed it to his master. "Here are the papers, sir."

Dufresne slit the envelope and drew out some folded sheets, clipped in a binder of blue paper. "Will you pardon me while I look these over? It is a business matter that must be taken care of at once, as the papers must be filed by midnight. Help yourself to the cigarettes."

The room in which they sat was spacious, high-ceilinged, and even in the subdued lighting it was apparent that unerring good taste had tempered the richness of its furnishings. Outside, the snow whipped in flurries against the panes and the wind swished past with a mournful sound suggestive of open, desolate places. There was nothing to indicate that there were twenty-eight stories above the street level of a teeming city.

When Dufresne had finished his perusal of the new contract, Andrews stood ready with a pen. Dufresne signed the document and returned it to the butler. "Give this to Mr. Harris and say that I'm much obliged to him."

"Is Andrews the only one of your staff here at the hotel, Mr. Dufresne?" Harper asked.

"My chauffeur is quartered here, too," was the reply. "The others are at my home. The house is not open just now. Mrs. Dufresne has been using the opportunity to have some of the rooms done over. At present she is visiting some relatives."

"I suppose she was very much upset when she heard about your mishap."

"Naturally," Dufresne answered shortly, and in what struck the detective as a peculiar tone. His host rose and went to a table near the hearth. A flood of soft light poured down on a charming photograph that stood on the table. "My wife, Harper—a very clever and beautiful woman."

Sergeant Harper nodded at this rather singular introduction. Rarely had he seen such appealing loveliness as was pictured here. The clear features beautifully modeled, a soft wistfulness about the eyes, curving lips haunted by the ghost of a smile, these remained vividly in his memory.

Pierre Dufresne stood with his back to the fireplace. The slender master of this lofty sky-house, alert, dark, immaculate in his well-cut dinner jacket, looked more than ever the true artist, the connoisseur of wealth and power, as he stood squarely upon his hearth, cigarette in one hand, a balloon glass gracefully balanced in the other.

Sergeant Stephen Harper was baffled by Dufresne's strange attitude and besides being puzzled he was not entirely comfortable. The evidence of wealth that met the eye everywhere set a barrier to the appraisal of his host's character, made it hard to separate the man from his luxurious background.

Of the fact that there was a real man there, a personality both vivid and complex, there could be no doubt. But ever since Harper had arrived, and no doubt before, Dufresne had been drinking, and drinking with a somber intentness that revealed a sullen purpose.

Perhaps, thought Harper, that was the explanation of Andrews' dour looks as he had hovered over the dinner table. First it had been highballs, and now brandy. Harper had grave doubts as to the wisdom of this mixture, but thus far the only apparent effect these potions had produced was a certain top-heavy dignity of speech and movement, a heightened glitter of those cynical eyes.

The detective-officer suddenly became aware of his host's counter-scrutiny. The latter's position, with his back to the fire, gave him a decided advantage in any exchange of glances. Harper could see little of his features save the glint of his rimless glasses.

"You'll do, Harper, you'll do, very well indeed," Dufresne pronounced gravely. "You've got the proper mentality for handling a case of this kind. You showed that to me by your very first move—searching this place before assigning your men to their posts."

"That was nothing but the simplest routine procedure," Harper deprecated.

Dufresne twirled the goblet gently in his fingers, looking thoughtfully into its contents. "I'll wager both Markison and Barry would have accepted my man's word for it that no one could have got in here and hid. The fact that there was no one here makes the point no less important."

Harper nodded. Perhaps he should have felt more flattered by the good opinion of this man of power, but he could not shake off that uncomfortable feeling that pricked the back of his mind. There was something incongruous, a feeling that destined events had already decided to take the course of perversity. Somehow, the power of the police marshaled against this anonymous threat seemed futile, a hollow parade of force. Yet it could not be reckoned so by any practical standard.

Court in Uproar as Helen Kane 'Boop-Boop-a-Doops' for Judge

New York, April 28 (AP)—"Boop-boop-a-doop." Four little words. Uproar, shouting, objections—in supreme court Justice J. McGoldrick's somber courtroom.

It was Helen Kane, showing how the "Boop-boop-a-doop," which she values at $250,000, is really sung.

Miss Kane, suing Max Fleischer, cartoonist, the Fleischer studios and the Paramount-Public corporation on charges of "unfair competition," pursued her lips, pouted a bit and burst forth with a "Boop-boop-a-doop" for Justice McGoldrick's benefit.

Defense counsel jumped to their feet shouting objections. For a moment all semblance of order was lost. Justice McGoldrick seemed to have difficulty keeping a straight face as he scratched notes on a pad.

Miss Kane's counsel smiled. He had asked her to demonstrate her "Boop-boop-a-doop" for the justice, who alone will decide the suit.

"Boop-boop-a-doop," she burst forth a second time, shouting to the puzzled court stenographer to "put it down; put it down!"

Miss Kane was silenced by Justice McGoldrick and a couple of her "boops" were eliminated from the record.

"How do you interpolate your boops in your songs?" the counsel asked.

"It's hard to say," she explained. "It's a form of rhythm I created. There's a bar of music and at the end there's a stop."

"Were you ever known as the boop girl?"

"Sometimes," she replied, smiling. "I was introduced as just 'Boop.'"

New York's retail credit collections improved sharply in March.

we do.—Carlyle.

Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times the files reveal.

TEN YEARS AGO
Town Man Weds A County Girl.— The Old Jesuit Mission at Buchanan Valley, was the scene Tuesday morning of a quiet wedding when Miss Martha M. Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Moore, of New Oxford, was married to James A. Oyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. I.
Oyer, East Middle street, Gettysburg. The nuptial mass, which was celebrated by Rev. Will W. Whalen, was held at 7:30 o'clock.

The bridegroom is a member of the firm of Clapsaddle and Oyer, whose concrete block plant is located south of Gettysburg, on the Baltimore pike.
The bride and bridegroom were attended by a newly married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Pius I. Smith, of New Oxford. The only witnesses of the wedding were the immediate families of the principals.

Upon their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Oyer will make their home in an apartment at 131 East Middle street.

Marriage Announced.—Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham, of Fairfield, announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Stewart Wrightwick, of New York city

Woods, for the past two years a teacher at the Arendtsville Voca-

But I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.

Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted of many.
So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

Wherefore I beseech you that ye would conform your love toward him.

For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.—2 Corinthians 2:1-9.

Saturday evening, May 3.
The comedy will see Frederick Reinartz in the titular role. Miss Louise Dougherty will have the leading feminine role. Dr. Richard Arms is at the helm of "Cappy Ricks."

Gettysburg talent in the cast includes Miss Madylin Roth, Miss Catherine Reaser, Horace Armor, the latter having the leading male part.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams
RICH DELIGHT

DURING a few brief weeks at Miami Beach, Florida, while vacationing and gathering a few new viewpoints for future reference, I had the occasion to invest—not in land—but in beauty and renewed friendships.

One evening Johnny Gruelle (the creator of "Raggedy Ann") and myself were talking in his home, when suddenly out from the silent night, there was a burst of song from the throat of a mocking bird. Its clear notes filled the night air with a rich delight. Why was it so happy?
Johnny stepped to his piano and played—and soon there was a concert of joy in which many mocking birds joined. All of which proved how contagious is all music.

In the dead of night these glorious birds will burst into song, and at early dawn they may be heard heralding in the day. They get nothing for their work beyond what the earth is able to give to them—a worm or so, a crumb here and there, perhaps. But they sing with all their bird hearts and with all the ability that they possess.

The mocking bird's rich delight is in opening up its heart and throat and giving out its song—freely and with no hope of any return.

Why is it that we humans trade so much in what we have to give?
Is there any reason in the world why we should expect anything in return for what we give to others beyond the pure pleasure of having given?

If friendship is of any value whatsoever, then it must ever be self-sustaining, reaping its reward the moment it enters into being. Friends were never created excepting for the pure pleasure of joy and happiness and rich delight. When they fail in this, they no longer deserve the name of friends.

I wonder how many there are who carry back to their homes in the north, the delight of the mocking bird's song, after their vacation days in the south? To this writer their song grows more melodious and sweet each year—and even during the summer time at my little lodge at "Weskawenaak" in Nova Scotia, I still hear the echo of their rich delight in song!

What a happy world we would have if people would concentrate upon giving out, instead of trying their best to get things—most of which they do not need.

Monkey Gland Rejuvenation Expert, 64, Marries Girl, 20

Bucharest, Rumania, April 28 (AP)—Professor Serge Voronoff, the famous champion of monkey-gland rejuvenation, now 64, and Fraulein Gertrude Schwaetz, an auburn-haired beauty 20 years old, were married here Thursday night.

The bride is a cousin of Mme Magda Lupescu, King Carol's friend, who introduced her to the professor. She is the daughter of an architect in the service of the Vienna municipal council, and her mother is the sister of Mme. Lupescu's mother.

Positive information of the engagement was received only Friday evening. The couple left on a honeymoon trip to Paris, where King Carol and his favorite, Mme.
Lupescu, spent many happy days.

It was first reported that the professor and Fraulein Schwaetz would go to Nice to be wed, but the marriage took place at the Austrian consulate here because the bride is an Austrian citizen.

During the professor's visits to Bucharest, he and Fraulein Schwaetz were often seen in the company of the red-haired Mme. Lupescu.
King Carol also has received Voronoff and bestowed a decoration on him in recognition of his services to science.

This honor was the Rumanian order of specialist.

Mme. Lupescu did not attend the wedding. Through the quiet ceremony Voronoff, a Viennese, stole a march on the Rumanian public but Rumanians think that "he who laughs last laughs best," because the news featuring the doctor's age and specialty spread rapidly.

Dr. Voronoff participated in several operations here and gave a series of lectures before the matrimonial object of his visit was revealed.

Dr. Voronoff also was received by the Dowager Queen Marie. The bride, who is known as extraordinarily beautiful in this city of beautiful women, moved here from Vienna several years ago with her parents.

The specialist came to Bucharest from Persia, where he examined a number of aged persons, including men claiming to be more than 140 years old.

—About—
New York

By GEORGE TUCKER
New York—Raphael Rupp, during a recent evening at bridge, paused between rubbers to relate this true tale of a family of Virginians sojourning in the metropolis for a few weeks:

"Having invited some friends to dinner, the father was mortified to hear his young son inquire, 'Are you all from Virginia too?' Dealing the lad a remonstrative look, he quickly began chattering of other things."

"After the guests had departed the father said sternly, 'Son, don't ever ask people if they are from Virginia. If they are Virginians you'll darn soon know it, and if they aren't they'll be embarrassed.'"

He Was Puzzled
Then there was the young Englishman studying chemistry in an eastern university. He had the misfortune to go to a dance one evening with a practical joker. The smart guy's first move was to inform all the girls that his friend had a wooden leg.

"When he asks you to dance, why don't you suggest sitting out? But don't mention his leg—he's sensitive."

Of course every girl in the place knew it in five minutes. Still igno-

Candidate Follows
His "Own Idea"

Park River, N. D. (AP)—Harry O'Brien, publisher of a newspaper here, said in announcing his candidacy for state senator: "Nobody asked me to become a candidate; it was my own idea."

He refused to kiss babies except a limited number of "female babies no less than 16 years of age."

He made no campaign promises and suggested voters take a gambling chance that he will make good.

Midshipmen at Annapolis are paid $780 a year.

Treated Dillinger,
Gets Suspension

Dr. N. G. Mortenson, St. Paul, Minn., city health officer, was suspended after it was learned that he treated John Dillinger and John Hamilton, notorious outlaws, for wounds received in a holdup. He said he was forced to treat them at the muzzle of a machine gun. (As-

Picked As Head Of Women Voters olis, Minn., was nominated for president of the National League of rant, the guest cut in. To his surprise the girl suggested they go for a stroll. He accepted with alacrity.

After half a dozen similar experiences, however, he began to worry.

"See here," he said to his friend,
"is there anything the matter with me?"

"You're a hit," the Tom Rover replied. "That's why they want to go out with you."

The climax came a few minutes later when one young lady said to the joker, "I don't believe he has a wooden leg. He walks with no limp at all."

"I'll tell you what you do. Go up and kick him on the shins. If he so much as notices it I'll buy you tickets to any show in town."

She did. The show she insisted on seeing was "Mary of Scotland." But she invited the young Englishman to see it with her, leaving the practical joker to prove himself a good loser.

Speaking of practical jokers, Joe Cook guarantees this remedy to cure or kill. One smart alec who had enjoyed himself at the expense of his friends got married. As the bride's party left the church his friends kidnapped him, put him in a cage and rode him around the streets of New York on a truck all night.

Viking Staff
If you care for such things you may see funeral urns containing the ashes of ancestors of Vikings on display in the American museum of natural history, on Seventy-seventh street.

One of the really fascinating things there is a collection of objects d'art in jade, amber, ivory, and lacquer, acquired over a lifetime of travel by the late Dr. I. Wyman Drummond. The most unusual piece, possibly, is an example of carved white jade representing the eight immortals of China.

Now back to the borboid note.
Carl Brisson has just received a pewter strip from a woman in Lancaster, England. She wants it autographed. Her idea is to cover her coffin with the names of famous people.

Janet Bretton, who is single and sings, has five sisters who teach school and are married.

THE FISHERMAN
A fisherman all winter long Has read his books and dreamed his dreams

Of willow banks along the streams, Wood smoke, a cardinal's burst of
song;

White clouds that sail in seas of blue,
But now soft breezes play about And daffodils come breaking through,

It's time to get the tackle out!

As one who rises from a sleep,
The fisherman bestirs himself, Puts back his book upon the shelf;
Sees ivy bud and start to creep;
The robins hopping on the lawn;
The trees' new buds begin to sprout,

And says with a tremendous yawn:
"It's time to get the tackle out!"

Grown pale with city desk and room;
Grown stale with city talk and spite,

His spirits once more come to life!
He sees the tulips start to bloom.
He hears the song birds blithe and gay,

And done with dismal dread and doubt.
He says: "Get ready now for May!
It's time to get the tackle out!"

SPORT SLANTS
By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Staff Writer

Making his way through London fog with an industrious eye to sporting affairs, our Texas delegate in the king's realm, Gayle Talbot, reports on a curious fistic circumstance as follows:

Four shining limousines, bearing a score of London's top-notch fight experts, rolled impressively to a great outdoor swimming emporium on the outskirts of the city.

The water looked cold, and inside the clubhouse, where a crude ring had been set up, it felt even colder. All concrete, and not a glimmer of heat. The journalists seated themselves expectantly and shivered.

"Jolly fine heating system," remarked one.
"Righto," affirmed another. "A wonder they didn't think to switch on the blasted fans."

Presently one Jack Doyle, a 220-pound Irish youth, slipped through the ropes, followed a moment later by a lightweight named Alf, whose features looked like they might have been caught under a harrow.

A Main-Eventer Gets Maimed Doyle was the bucko the boys had come out to clock. He was fighting the main event at Albert Hall three nights hence and the advance sale had been very pleasing to Jeff Dickson & Co., promoters. Doyle, one had heard, looked like the greatest heavyweight prospect Britain had produced in years.

Someone called "time!"—and little Alf promptly began to take big Jack apart, piece by piece. He whanged Jack's handsome profile with a succession of lefts and, encouraged by his half-frozen audience, poured in a few jolting rights.
Doyle's nose started to bleed and he looked unhappy. After four minutes of sampling Alf's medicine, Jack seemed pretty well done in.

"Boy, isn't he terrible," chortled a voice, which turned out to be that of Promoter Dickson. He was enjoying it!

From Doyle's camp the caravan rushed straight to the quarters of large Frank Borington, the gent he was scheduled to meet. Lots of red-hot fans there, anxious to watch Frank do his stuff. Even Desmond Jeanes, reputed to be the world's only heavyweight to sport a monocle (outside the ring, of course), pressed up close to see the fireworks.

So They Pack 'Em In!
Here, came the thought, we'll see a fellow look mighty good. It's the old build-up. He'll look like he could tear Doyle apart and the fans will turn out in large numbers to watch him do it. Foxy showman, this Dickson.

The thought persisted when they brought on the victim. He was, the announcer said, the amateur champion of the London police force. His ring togs consisted of a pair of ragged blue trunks pulled on haphazardly over a suit of long woolen underwear. He looked scared and one shuddered to think what the muscular Borington would do to him.

Shy of ring science the cop might have been, but for two rounds he soaked Borington around like a Union Square bluecoat reasoning with a May day demonstrator.
Twice Borington's handlers stopped it to get their man's helmet out of his eyes and to let him catch his breath. The cop looked disappointed when they finally pulled him off. He was going for a knockout!

"Well," someone asked the promoter, "now that you've seen both of them, who'll win—Doyle or Borington?"

"I pick the cop," laughed Dickson.

Moral: Borington and Doyle packed 'em in at Albert Hall, prov-

TEXAS CLAIMS ANOTHER TITLE

Senator Sheppard Gives Cowboy State Another New State Honor.

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington—The state of Texas, already holder of a number of distinctions and titles in the "new deal" administration, has added another to its list.

Senator Morris Sheppard, by the death of Representative Pou of North Carolina, becomes the ranking member of both houses of congress in the matter of continuous service.

The mild-mannered, gray-haired little Texan, the father of the 18th amendment, has served in the senate for 21 years and was a member of the house for 11 years before.

His years of service in congress now stand at 32 and it will not be until 1937 that his present term expires.

Next to Sheppard stands Joe Robinson of Arkansas, democratic leader of the senate, who has spent 21 years in that body and 10 years before that in the house, and Nor-
